Future Perfect & Future Continuous: Completed and Ongoing Future Actions

1 · NOTICE

- By the year 2050, engineers will have built entire cities that produce their own clean energy.
- This time next year, I will be studying engineering at a university in another city.
- In a hundred years, doctors probably will have found cures for diseases that are incurable today.
- Don't call me at nine — I will be presenting my project to the class then.

Which sentences describe an action that will be completed before a certain point in the future, and which describe an action that will be in progress at a certain point in the future?

2 · DISCOVER — A · COMPLETE THE RULE

Look at the Notice sentences again. Complete the rule with the words in the box.

will have + past participle

will be + -ing

completed before a specific future time in progress at a specific future time

- The Future Perfect () describes an action that will be .
- The Future Continuous () describes an action that will be .

B Build sentences

Use the cues to build true predictions. Choose the Future Perfect or the Future Continuous.

e.g. by 2040 scientists / develop a cure for many cancers

By 2040, scientists will have developed a cure for many cancers.

- this time next week I / sit my university entrance exam

- by the end of this century sea levels / rise by at least one metre, according to some scientists

3. ten years from now robots / probably / do most repetitive factory jobs
4. by 2100 engineers / build floating cities to deal with rising sea levels
5. ? / you / still / work in this job in ten years' time

C Your turn

Write four predictions about your own life or the world, using the Future Perfect and the Future Continuous.

By the time I'm thirty, I...

This time next year, I...

In fifty years, scientists...

By 2100, the world...

RULE

The Future Perfect (will have + past participle) describes an action that will be completed before a specific point in the future (By 2050, they will have built...). The Future Continuous (will be + -ing) describes an action that will be in progress at a specific point in the future (This time next year, I will be studying...).

TR Future Perfect (will have + V3), gelecekte belirli bir zamandan ÖNCE tamamlanmış olacak bir eylemi anlatır (By 2050, they will have built...). Future Continuous (will be + -ing), gelecekte belirli bir anda DEVAM ETMEKTE olacak bir eylemi anlatır (This time next year, I will be studying...).

When?

We use the Future Perfect to say an action will be finished by a certain future time, and the Future Continuous to say an action will be happening at that future time.

TR Bir eylemin gelecekte belirli bir zamana kadar tamamlanmış olacağını söylerken Future Perfect; o anda devam ediyor olacağını söylerken Future Continuous kullanırız.

POSITIVE	NEGATIVE	QUESTION	SHORT ANSWERS
By 2040, we will have developed cheaper renewable energy.	They won't have finished the new metro line by next year.	Will scientists have found a cure for this disease by 2050?	Yes, they will. / No, they won't.
This time tomorrow, I will be flying to Izmir.	I won't be working at six — I'll already be home.	Will you be living in the same city in ten years?	Yes, I will. / No, I won't.

X WRONG	✓ RIGHT	WHY?
By 2050, we will build flying cars for everyone.	By 2050, we will have built flying cars for everyone.	For an action completed by a specific future time, use 'will have + past participle', not the simple 'will'. TR Belirli bir gelecek zamana kadar tamamlanmış bir eylem için 'will' değil, 'will have + V3' kullanılmalıdır.
This time next year, I will study at university.	This time next year, I will be studying at university.	For an action in progress at a specific future moment, you need the Future Continuous (will be + -ing). TR Gelecekte belirli bir anda devam eden bir eylem için Future Continuous (will be + -ing) gerekir.
By the time she graduates, she will have living abroad for two years.	By the time she graduates, she will have lived abroad for two years.	After 'will have', use the past participle, not the -ing form. TR 'will have' den sonra fiilin -ing hali değil, üçüncü hali (past participle) gelir.

Future Expressions: be about to / be bound to / be likely to / be set to

1 · NOTICE

- Look at those clouds — it is about to pour with rain any second.
- If nobody changes their habits, plastic waste is bound to keep piling up in the oceans.
- Experts say driverless taxis are likely to become common in big cities within ten years.
- The government's new recycling law is set to come into force next January.

Which expression describes something about to happen in the next few moments, which describes something almost certain, which describes something probable, and which describes something officially planned?

2 · DISCOVER — A · COMPLETE THE RULE

Match each expression to its meaning by completing the rule with the words in the box.

about to happen in the next few moments certain or almost certain to happen probable, but not certain officially planned or expected to happen

- 'be about to' = something _____.
- 'be bound to' = something _____.
- 'be likely to' = something _____.
- 'be set to' = something _____.

B Build sentences

Use the cues to build sentences with the correct future expression.

e.g. the film be about to / start — hurry up!

The film is about to start — hurry up!

1. prices be likely to / rise if fuel costs keep increasing

2. the new bridge be set to / open in the spring

3. if we don't act now the situation be bound to / get worse

4. look the bus be about to / leave — run!

5. ? / this new policy be likely to / change people's daily habits

C Your turn

Write four predictions about the future of your city, your school or the world, using be about to, be bound to, be likely to and be set to.

Our city is set to...

Sooner or later, our school is bound to...

Technology is likely to...

Look — it's about to...

RULE

'be about to' describes something that will happen in the very near future (in seconds or minutes); 'be bound to' describes something certain or almost certain; 'be likely to' describes something probable but not certain; 'be set to' describes something officially planned or expected.

TR 'be about to' çok yakın gelecekte olacak bir eylemi (birkaç saniye/dakika içinde); 'be bound to' kesin ya da neredeyse kesin olacak bir şeyi; 'be likely to' olası ama kesin olmayan bir şeyi; 'be set to' resmi olarak planlanmış/beklenen bir olayı anlatır.

When?

We use these expressions to show how certain a prediction is: an immediate event, an inevitable result, a probable development, or a planned event.

TR Tahminlerimizin ne kadar kesin olduğunu belirtmek istediğimizde bu ifadeleri kullanırız: anlık bir olay, kaçınılmaz bir sonuç, olası bir gelişme ya da planlanmış bir olay.

POSITIVE	NEGATIVE	QUESTION	SHORT ANSWERS
The meeting is about to begin. This plan is set to change everything.	This isn't likely to happen before next year. Nothing here is about to change overnight.	Is the economy likely to improve next year? Is the new law set to affect small businesses?	Yes, it is. / No, it isn't. Yes, it is. / No, it isn't.

X WRONG	✓ RIGHT	WHY?
Sea levels are bound to rising if nothing changes.	Sea levels are bound to rise if nothing changes.	'be bound to' is followed by the to-infinitive (base verb), not the -ing form. TR 'be bound to' dan sonra fiilin -ing hali değil, to-infinitive (yaln hâli) gelir.
The train is likely arrive late today.	The train is likely to arrive late today.	'likely' is an adjective and needs 'to': be likely TO do something. TR 'likely' sıfattır ve 'to' ile kullanılmalıdır: be likely TO do sth.
The new mall is about opening next week.	The new mall is about to open next week.	Don't forget the 'to' in the fixed expression 'be about to'. TR 'be about to' kalıbında 'to' unutulmamalıdır.

Make predictions before you read.

1. Look at the title. What do you imagine life will be like in 100 years?
2. What is one piece of technology you think will completely change in the future?

A Postcard from 2126

- 1 Imagine a morning a hundred years from now. Your bedroom lights adjust themselves before you even open your eyes, and a gentle voice tells you the weather, your first meeting, and how well you slept. By the time you reach the kitchen, a small robot has already prepared your breakfast according to what your body needs that day. Outside, the streets are quieter than today's, filled with silent electric vehicles and bicycles rather than roaring engines. Most rooftops are covered with solar panels, and vertical gardens climb the sides of buildings, growing vegetables for the neighbourhood. It sounds like science fiction, yet many of these ideas are already being tested in cities around the world.
- 2 Work will probably look very different too. Automation is bound to take over repetitive tasks, from packing boxes to answering simple customer questions, freeing people for more creative or caring jobs. Some researchers predict that by 2126 many adults will have changed careers several times, constantly learning new skills as technology develops. Others are less certain, warning that the transition could increase inequality if only some people gain access to good education and training. Either way, the classroom of the future is set to look nothing like the classroom of today, with lessons designed around each learner's pace rather than a fixed timetable for everyone.
- 3 Not everything, however, is guaranteed to improve. Rising sea levels are likely to force some coastal communities to move inland, and overpopulation in certain regions could put pressure on food, water and housing. Scientists are on the verge of several breakthroughs in renewable energy and medicine, but whether societies use these discoveries wisely remains an open question. Perhaps the most honest postcard from 2126 wouldn't promise a perfect world — just one that is different, and, with the right choices, possibly fairer than our own.

- What do you think a 'vertical farm' might be?

- Have you ever had to negotiate a compromise with someone? What happened?

Negotiating Tomorrow

- Last month, the town council of a small coastal city held an unusual meeting. A group of young engineers had submitted a proposal to turn an old car park into a 'vertical farm' — a multi-storey building that would grow vegetables using solar power and recycled water. Some council members were immediately in favour, arguing that the project was bound to reduce the town's dependence on imported food. Others were more cautious, worried about the cost and whether local residents would actually support it.

- 2 After two hours of discussion, neither side was ready to give in completely, so they began to negotiate a compromise. The engineers agreed to reduce the size of the project in its first year, while the council agreed to provide a small grant instead of covering the full cost. 'It isn't exactly what we proposed,' admitted one engineer afterwards, 'but it's a realistic first step, and we're likely to expand it later if it works.' The council also promised to review the results in due course, rather than committing to years of funding immediately.
- 3 For many residents watching the debate online, the meeting was a lesson in how future-focused decisions actually get made — not through grand, perfect plans, but through patient back-and-forth negotiation. As one council member put it, 'Nobody got everything they wanted, but nobody walked away empty-handed either. Sooner or later, that's how most good ideas about the future become real.'

Aim Use the words and structures of the theme in real communication tasks.

S1 Life in 100 Years

In pairs, discuss what you think everyday life will be like in 100 years. Talk about at least three areas (home, transport, work, food, or health), using the Future Perfect, Future Continuous and future expressions (be likely to, be bound to, be set to) where natural.

S2 Let's Negotiate

In pairs, role-play a short negotiation. Student A proposes a plan for the future (e.g. how your class should prepare for exams, or a change to your school). Student B should not agree immediately — negotiate a compromise using phrases for accepting, turning down and adjusting a proposal.

W1 Life in the Future: An Essay

Plan and write an essay giving your opinion on what life will be like in 50 to 100 years. Draw a simple outline first (introduction, two developing paragraphs, conclusion), and use at least two linkers of addition (furthermore, in addition, moreover) and two linkers of contrast (however, on the other hand, although).

CHECKLIST

- ☐ Clear introduction stating your overall opinion
- ☐ Outline drawn before writing (intro / body / conclusion)
- ☐ At least 2 linkers of addition and 2 of contrast
- ☐ Uses Future Perfect, Future Continuous or a future expression at least twice
- ☐ 180–220 words

W2 Negotiating by Email

Your class has been offered two different options for a future school trip, but you and your classmates disagree about which one to choose. Write a semi-formal email to your teacher proposing a compromise, explaining what each side wants and suggesting a fair solution.

CHECKLIST

- ☐ Clear opening explaining the situation
- ☐ Describes both sides of the disagreement fairly
- ☐ Proposes a specific, realistic compromise
- ☐ Polite, semi-formal tone throughout
