Correlative Conjunctions — both...and, either...or, neither...nor, not only...but also

Correlative conjunctions are pairs of words (both...and, either...or, neither...nor, not only...but also) that connect two equal grammatical elements — words, phrases, or clauses — within a sentence. The two connected elements should have the same grammatical form (parallel structure).

Correlative conjunctions (both...and, either...or, neither...nor, not only...but also), bir cümle içinde iki eş değerli unsuru (kelime, öbek ya da cümlecik) birbirine bağlayan çift bağlaçlardır. Bağlanan iki unsur aynı dilbilgisel yapıda olmalıdır (paralel yapı).

When? We use both...and to add two positive ideas equally; either...or to show a choice between two options; neither...nor to negate two ideas together; and not only...but also to emphasise an additional, often stronger, point.

İki olumlu fikri eşit şekilde eklemek için both...and; iki seçenek arasında tercih belirtmek için either...or; iki fikri birlikte olumsuz yapmak için neither...nor; ek ve genellikle daha güçlü bir noktayı vurgulamak için not only...but also kullanılır.

Positive

- Both + A + and + B
- Not only + A + but also + B

Negative

- Neither + A + nor + B

Question

- Is/Are + subject + both + A + and + B?
- Does/Do + subject + either + A + or + B?

Short answers

- Neither do I.
- So does she. (in response to a both...and statement)

Common mistakes

- ~~She is both honest and she is kind.~~ → She is both honest and kind.
- ~~He neither likes tea or coffee.~~ → He likes neither tea nor coffee.
- ~~Not only she is kind but also generous.~~ → She is not only kind but also generous.
- ~~Either you apologise either you leave.~~ → Either you apologise or you leave.

1. Choose the correct pair: 'The speech was _____ interesting _____ well delivered.'

- a. either...or
- b. both...and ✓
- c. neither...nor
- d. not...nor

Both...and adds two equally true positive qualities.

2. You can _____ call me tonight _____ send a message tomorrow. (either...or)

Either...or presents a choice between two options.

3. 'He is _____ rude _____ unfriendly; he's actually very polite.' Choose the best pair.

- a. both...and
- b. either...or
- c. neither...nor ✓
- d. not only...but also

Neither...nor makes both ideas negative together.

4. 'She is both talented and she works hard' is grammatically correct. — True / False (Incorrect — It should be 'She is both talented and hardworking' (two parallel adjectives).)

5. Good manners are _____ about words _____ about actions. (not only...but also)

Not only...but also adds a stronger, additional point.

6. Put the words in order: is / neither / lazy / nor / dishonest / he

He is neither lazy nor dishonest.

7. Rewrite using both...and: My brother is honest. My brother is kind. (My brother is...) My brother is both honest and kind.

8. Which sentence correctly uses 'not only...but also' with subject-verb inversion?

- a. Not only she is kind, but also generous.
- b. Not only is she kind, but she is also generous. ✓
- c. Not only kind she is, but also generous.
- d. She not only is kind but also is generous is.

When 'not only' starts the sentence, the auxiliary verb comes before the subject (inversion).

9. Combine using neither...nor: The restaurant wasn't cheap. The restaurant wasn't very good. (The restaurant was...) The restaurant was neither cheap nor very good.

Good Manners Around the World

Before you read

- Think about a time you visited a new place or met people from a different background. What customs surprised you?
- What does the word 'etiquette' mean to you?

Every culture in the world has its own set of unwritten rules about polite behaviour. These rules, often called social norms or etiquette, guide how people greet each other, eat together, and show respect. Although the details are different, most cultures share the same basic values: honesty, kindness, and respect for others.

In many Western countries, a firm handshake and direct eye contact are seen as signs of confidence and respect. In parts of East Asia, a slight bow is more common, and it is considered impolite to shake hands too firmly. In some Middle Eastern and South Asian cultures, taking off your shoes before entering someone's home is both a custom and a sign of courtesy toward the host.

Table manners also vary widely. In some countries, finishing every bite on your plate shows gratitude to the cook. In others, leaving a little food behind is a polite way of showing that you have had enough. Neither habit is right or wrong on its own — both are simply different expressions of the same value: respect.

Learning about another culture's customs is not just useful for travellers. It also teaches tolerance and open-mindedness. When we understand why people behave the way they do, we are less likely to judge them unfairly. A truly polite person is not only someone who follows their own culture's rules but also someone who respects other people's norms, even when those norms are unfamiliar.

So the next time you meet someone from a different background, try to notice — and appreciate — both the differences and the shared values underneath them.

1. According to the text, what do most cultures share, despite different customs?

- a. The same table manners
- b. The same greeting style
- c. Basic values like honesty, kindness and respect ✓
- d. The same rules about shoes

The text says most cultures share the same basic values, even though customs differ.

2. In the text, what is considered impolite in parts of East Asia?

- a. Bowing slightly
- b. Shaking hands too firmly ✓
- c. Removing your shoes
- d. Finishing your food

The text says shaking hands too firmly is considered impolite in parts of East Asia.

3. In some Middle Eastern and South Asian cultures, taking off your _____ before entering a home shows courtesy. (shoes)

The text states that removing your shoes is both a custom and a sign of courtesy.

4. The text says finishing all the food on your plate is always the polite thing to do everywhere. — True / False

(Incorrect — The text says the polite habit differs between countries — sometimes finishing food, sometimes leaving a little.)

5. What does understanding other cultures' customs help us do, according to the text?

- a. Judge people more quickly
- b. Avoid unfair judgement of others ✓
- c. Avoid all travel
- d. Follow only our own norms

The text says understanding customs makes us less likely to judge people unfairly.

6. Which sentence best describes a 'truly polite person' according to the text?

- a. Someone who never leaves their own country
- b. Someone who respects both their own and others' norms ✓
- c. Someone who always shakes hands
- d. Someone who never eats at other people's homes

The text says a truly polite person respects both their own culture's rules and other people's norms.

After you read

- Which custom described in the text was new information for you?
- Do you think it's important to learn local customs before travelling? Why or why not?

What Makes a Good Person?

Before you read

- What three words would you use to describe a person with good values?
- Do you think values like honesty and kindness are the same everywhere, or do they change from place to place?

If you ask ten different people what makes a good person, you will probably get ten different answers. Still, certain values appear again and again in these answers: honesty, kindness, respect, and responsibility. Many people believe that a good person is not only kind to their friends but also fair to strangers.

Honesty is often mentioned first. Telling the truth, even when it is uncomfortable, builds trust between people. A student who admits a mistake honestly, instead of blaming someone else, earns more respect in the long run than one who hides the truth. Integrity — doing the right thing even when no one is watching — is closely connected to honesty.

Kindness and empathy are also seen as essential. A kind person notices when someone is struggling and offers help without expecting anything in return. Empathy allows us to imagine how another person feels, which makes it easier to be patient and understanding, especially with people whose experiences are very different from our own.

Responsibility matters too. Good citizens take responsibility for their actions, both at home and in their community. They understand that their choices — whether it's keeping a promise or recycling their waste — affect other people. Being responsible is not always exciting, but it is one of the clearest signs of maturity.

In the end, there is probably no single answer to what makes a good person. It depends on either the culture you grew up in or the personal experiences that shaped you. What most people can agree on, however, is that values like honesty, kindness, and responsibility make communities stronger — wherever you happen to live.

A Okay, for our debate club topic this week — which is more important, honesty or kindness?

B That's a tough one. I'd say honesty, actually. Without honesty, you can't really trust anyone, even a kind person.

A I see your point, but I think kindness matters more. You can be both honest and quite harsh at the same time, and that can really hurt people.

B True, but a kind lie is still a lie. If a friend asks for your honest opinion about their project and you just say something nice to avoid hurting them, are you really helping them?

A Good question. Maybe the real answer is that we need both — honesty delivered with kindness.

B Exactly. Neither value on its own is enough. It's not only what you say but also how you say it.

A So for our presentation, let's argue that a good friend is neither purely honest nor purely kind — they combine both.

B Perfect. Let's write that down before we forget it.

Customs from My Grandmother's Village

The speaker explains that the youngest person shares something they are grateful for.

2. The speaker says the custom is not only about saying thank you _____ also about noticing good things. (but)

The speaker uses the pair not only...but also to add extra information.

3. According to the speaker, only rich families in the village follow this custom. — True / False (Incorrect — The speaker says neither rich nor poor families skip the custom — everyone follows it.)

4. What value does this custom mainly teach, according to the speaker?

- a. Honesty
- b. Gratitude ✓
- c. Punctuality
- d. Competition

The speaker says the custom is about gratitude and respect.

Transcript (teacher use)

Student Hi everyone. For my presentation today, I want to talk about a small custom from my grandmother's village. Every Sunday, the whole family sits down together for a big meal, and before anyone starts eating, the youngest person at the table has to say one thing they are grateful for that week.

Student At first, I thought it was a little strange — I mean, either you're hungry and want to eat, or you're standing there talking, right? But over time, I realised the custom isn't really about the food. It's about gratitude and respect for the people around you.

Student My grandmother says this tradition is not only about saying 'thank you' but also about noticing the good things in your life, even during a difficult week. Neither rich nor poor families in her village skip this small ritual — everyone does it, from children to grandparents.

Student Now, whenever my family gets together, we try to keep the custom going, even though we live in the city. It reminds us that some values, like gratitude, don't change, even when everything else around us does.
