The Passive Voice (Present Simple, Past Simple, Present/Past Continuous, Future, and Modals)

The passive voice is formed with the correct tense of the verb 'be' + the past participle of the main verb. We use it when the action itself, or the thing the action happens to, is more important than who performs it. The form changes according to tense: present simple (is/are + p.p.), past simple (was/were + p.p.), present continuous (is/are being + p.p.), past continuous (was/were being + p.p.), future simple (will be + p.p.), and with modals (modal + be + p.p.).

Edilgen çatı (passive voice), doğru zamandaki 'be' fiili + ana fiilin geçmiş zaman ortacı (past participle) ile oluşturulur. Eylemi kimin yaptığından çok, eylemin kendisi veya eylemin yapıldığı şey önemliyse kullanılır. Zamana göre biçimi değişir: geniş zaman (is/are + p.p.), geçmiş zaman (was/were + p.p.), şimdiki zamanın sürekli hali (is/are being + p.p.), geçmiş zamanın sürekli hali (was/were being + p.p.), gelecek zaman (will be + p.p.) ve kiplerle birlikte (modal + be + p.p.).

When? We use the passive voice when describing historic facts (who built something is unknown or unimportant), when talking about processes happening to a place now (restoration, repair), when describing future plans for a site, and when giving rules or recommendations about protecting a place.

Edilgen çatıyı; tarihi bir gerçeği anlatırken (bir şeyi kimin yaptığı bilinmiyorsa veya önemli değilse), bir yere şu anda uygulanan bir süreçten (restorasyon, onarım) bahsederken, bir yer için gelecek planlarından söz ederken ve bir yeri korumaya dair kural ya da tavsiye verirken kullanırız.

An Underground City

Before you read

- Have you ever heard of a city built entirely underground?
- What do you think life might have been like living below the surface?

In the region of Cappadocia, in central Türkiye, several underground cities can be found carved into the soft volcanic rock. One of the largest of these was discovered almost by accident in 1963, when a local resident knocked down a wall in his house and found a hidden tunnel behind it. Since then, many chambers, corridors and rooms have been uncovered by archaeologists.

It is believed that the underground city was first used thousands of years ago as a place of shelter. Over time, rooms were carved deeper and deeper into the rock, and the settlement was gradually expanded until it could hold thousands of people along with their animals and food supplies. Stables, kitchens, storage rooms and even small churches were built several levels below the ground.

Large round stones were used as doors, and these could be rolled across the entrances from the inside to block invaders. Fresh air was supplied through a clever system of ventilation shafts that also reached the surface, and wells were dug to provide clean water even during long periods underground.

Today, only a small part of the underground city is open to visitors, since new tunnels and rooms are still being explored. It has become one of the most popular attractions in the region, and it is visited by travellers from all over the world who want to see how people once lived beneath the earth.

1. When was the underground city discovered?

- a. In ancient times
- b. In 1963 ✓
- c. Last year
- d. It has never been discovered

The text says it was discovered almost by accident in 1963.

2. The underground city was used only for one day at a time. — True / False (Incorrect — The underground city could hold thousands of people for long periods.)

3. Large round stones were used as _____ that could be rolled across entrances. (doors)

The text explains that round stones served as doors.

4. How was fresh air supplied to the underground city?

- a. Through open windows
- b. Through ventilation shafts ✓
- c. It was not supplied
- d. Through the main entrance only

The text mentions a system of ventilation shafts reaching the surface.

5. Rewrite this sentence in the passive: 'People are still exploring new tunnels and rooms.' (New tunnels and rooms ...) New tunnels and rooms are still being explored.

6. Why is only a small part of the underground city open to visitors?

AbOnlineEnglish Upper Secondary — 11. Sınıf — Answer Key · Orijinal içerik, TYMM müfredatıyla uyumlu.

- a. It is too dangerous
- b. New tunnels and rooms are still being explored ✓
- c. It is closed for repairs
- d. Tourists are not allowed inside

The final paragraph states this reason directly.

A City Built on Water

Before you read

- Do you know of any famous cities built on water or beside a strait?
- What difficulties do you think a city built between two seas might have?

Istanbul is one of the few cities in the world that is built on two continents, with the Bosphorus strait dividing its European and Asian sides. For thousands of years, the city has been ruled by different empires, and each civilisation has left behind its own buildings, walls and monuments.

The old city walls, parts of which can still be seen today, were originally constructed to protect the city from land and sea attacks. Massive gates were built into the walls, and guards were once stationed at each one to check everyone entering the city. Although much of the wall has been damaged over the centuries, sections of it have been carefully restored so that visitors can imagine how strong the defences once were.

One of the city's most famous buildings began its life as a church, was later converted into a mosque, and for many years was used as a museum before being reopened as a mosque again. Its enormous dome, which amazed visitors when it was completed, is still considered an outstanding achievement of engineering.

Today, bridges and tunnels connect the two sides of the city, and thousands of commuters cross the strait every single day. Ferries are still used by many people, partly because they are convenient and partly because the crossing offers wonderful views of the city's skyline. New museums and cultural centres are being opened all the time, which shows that this ancient city continues to change while its history is carefully preserved.

1. What divides the European and Asian sides of the city described?

- a. A mountain range
- b. The Bosphorus strait ✓
- c. A desert
- d. A large lake

The text states the Bosphorus strait divides the two sides.

2. The old city walls were originally built to _____ the city from attacks. (protect)

The text says the walls were constructed to protect the city.

3. The famous domed building described has always been used only as a mosque. — True / False (Incorrect — It was first a church, later a mosque, then a museum, and then a mosque again.)

4. How do most commuters cross between the two sides of the city today?

- a. Only by ferry
- b. By bridges, tunnels, and ferries ✓
- c. By walking across the strait
- d. The crossing is not possible

The text mentions bridges, tunnels and ferries as ways to cross.

5. Rewrite in the passive: 'People are opening new museums all the time.' (New museums ...) New museums are being opened all the time.

After you read

- What do you think makes a city special when it is built between two continents?
- Which parts of a city's history do you think are most important to preserve?

The narrator says hot air balloon rides are offered.

Transcript (teacher use)

Narrator This valley is famous for its unusual, cone-shaped rock formations, which are often called 'fairy chimneys' by visitors.

Narrator The formations were created over millions of years by volcanic eruptions, which covered the whole area in soft ash and rock.

Narrator Later, this soft rock was shaped by wind and rain, and a harder layer of stone on top protected the columns underneath from being worn away completely.

Narrator As a result, tall, cone-shaped towers were left standing, some of them more than thirty metres high.

Narrator Today, the valley is visited by thousands of tourists every year, and hot air balloon rides are offered so that visitors can see the strange landscape from above.

Narrator New paths and viewing points have been added recently, but the natural formations themselves are strictly protected and must not be damaged.
