Mixed Conditionals: Linking a Past Decision to a Present Situation

1 · NOTICE

- If she hadn't moved to the mountains ten years ago, she wouldn't be living this simply now.
- If he hadn't given up his office job, he wouldn't be growing his own vegetables today.
- They wouldn't own this cabin now if they hadn't taken the risk five years ago.
- If she hadn't inherited the family land, would she be living this unconventional life today?

In each sentence, does the 'if' part refer to the past or the present? What about the result?

2 · DISCOVER — A · COMPLETE THE RULE

Complete the rule with the words in the box.

the past

the present

would/wouldn't + base verb

had/hadn't + past participle

1. In a mixed conditional like this, the 'if' clause refers to _____, and uses _____.
2. The result clause refers to _____, and uses _____.

B Build sentences

Use the cues to build true mixed conditional sentences.

e.g.

she

not move to the countryside

she / not know how to grow vegetables now

If she hadn't moved to the countryside, she wouldn't know how to grow vegetables now.

1. he not leave his office job he / not have this much free time now

2. they not build their own cabin they / not be living rent-free today

3. she not learn to fish and forage she / not survive alone in the forest now

4. we not decide to downsize we / not feel this free now

5. ? / she not inherit the family land she / live this unconventional life today

C Your turn

Write four mixed conditional sentences about your own life, or about someone you know who made an unusual choice, linking a past decision to a present situation.

If I hadn't...

If my family hadn't...

She wouldn't be... now if...

We wouldn't have... today if...

RULE

Mixed conditionals connect a past decision or action to a present situation. The 'if' clause refers to the past (had/hadn't + past participle); the result clause refers to the present (would/wouldn't + base verb).

TR Mixed conditionals (karışık koşul cümleleri), geçmişteki bir kararın şimdiki bir durum üzerindeki etkisini anlatmak için kullanılır. 'If' cümlecğinde geçmişe atıfta bulunmak için 'had/hadn't + past participle' kullanılır; sonuç cümlecğinde ise şimdiki zamana atıfta bulunmak için 'would/wouldn't + base verb' kullanılır.

When?

We use this structure to talk about how a past decision — such as moving, leaving a job, or choosing a lifestyle — still affects someone's present living conditions.

TR Geçmişte alınan bir kararın (taşınma, bir işten ayrılma, bir yaşam biçimi seçme gibi) bugünkü yaşam koşulları üzerindeki etkisini anlatırken bu yapıyı kullanırız.

POSITIVE	NEGATIVE	QUESTION	SHORT ANSWERS
If she hadn't moved off-grid, she wouldn't be living this simply now.	If they hadn't downsized, they wouldn't feel this free now.	Would you be living differently now if you had made a different choice?	Yes, I would. / No, I wouldn't.
If he hadn't taken the risk, he wouldn't own this land today.	If we hadn't left the city, we wouldn't be growing our own food today.	If she hadn't inherited the land, would she be doing this today?	Yes, she would. / No, she wouldn't.

X WRONG	✓ RIGHT	WHY?
If she didn't move to the mountains, she wouldn't be living this simply now.	If she hadn't moved to the mountains, she wouldn't be living this simply now.	When the 'if' clause refers to a past action, use 'had + past participle', not the Simple Past. TR Geçmişteki bir eylemden bahsederken 'if' cümleciğinde Simple Past değil, 'had + past participle' kullanılmalıdır.
If he hadn't left his job, he won't have this free time today.	If he hadn't left his job, he wouldn't have this free time today.	The result clause needs 'would', not 'will', because it links to an unreal present situation. TR Sonuç cümleciğinde şimdiki zamana atıfta bulunurken 'will' değil 'would' kullanılır.
If they hadn't downsized, they wouldn't have felt this free now.	If they hadn't downsized, they wouldn't feel this free now.	When the result refers to the present, use 'would + base verb', not 'would have + past participle'. TR Sonuç şimdiki zamana ait olduğunda 'would have + past participle' değil, 'would + base verb' kullanılır.

Relative Clauses: Describing Unusual People, Places and Lifestyles

1 · NOTICE

- A digital nomad is someone who works online while travelling the world.
- The valley, which has no roads or electricity, is home to just three families.
- This is the cabin where the family spent their first off-grid winter.
- Elena, whose entire house runs on solar power, hasn't paid an electricity bill in years.

In which sentence does the relative clause give extra, non-essential information (with commas), and in which sentences is it essential to identify who or what we mean?

2 · DISCOVER — A · COMPLETE THE RULE*Complete the rule with the words in the box.*

defining (no commas, essential)

non-defining (with commas, extra info)

who/that which/that where whose

- A relative clause that is essential to identify the person or thing is called _____.
- A relative clause that adds extra, non-essential information, and can be removed, is called _____.
- We use _____ for people, _____ for things, _____ for places, and _____ for possession.

B Build sentences*Combine the two sentences using a relative clause.*

e.g. A hermit is a person. This person chooses to live alone.

A hermit is a person who chooses to live alone.

- Mira built her own house from recycled materials. Mira now teaches other people to do the same.

2. The commune grows all of its own food. The commune has around forty members.

3. This is the mountain hut. The family spent three winters there.

4. Tomas gave up his salary to become a shepherd. Tomas's flock now provides everything his family needs.

5. ? / Do you know anyone. This person has chosen an unconventional lifestyle.

C Your turn

Write four sentences describing unusual people, places or lifestyles using relative clauses (who, which, where, whose).

A digital nomad is someone who...

I'd love to visit a place where...

I know someone whose...

An off-grid home is a house which...

RULE

Defining relative clauses (who, which, where, whose, that) are essential to identify who or what we mean and are not separated by commas. Non-defining relative clauses add extra information, are separated by commas, can be removed without changing the core meaning, and never use 'that'.

TR Defining relative clause'lar (who, which, where, whose, that), kimden ya da neyden bahsettiğimizi belirlemek için gereklidir ve virgülle ayrılmaz. Non-defining relative clause'lar ise ekstra bilgi verir, virgülle ayrılır ve cümleden çıkarılabilir; bu tür cümlelerde 'that' kullanılmaz.

When?

We use relative clauses to identify or add extra information about people, places or lifestyles.

TR İnsanları, yerleri ya da yaşam tarzlarını tanımlarken ya da hakkında ek bilgi verirken relative clause kullanınız.

POSITIVE	NEGATIVE	QUESTION	SHORT ANSWERS
A hermit is someone who lives alone, away from other people. The valley, which has no roads, can only be reached on foot.	This isn't a lifestyle which everyone could manage. He doesn't live in a place where phones even work.	Do you know anyone whose life is completely off-grid? Is this the cabin where they spent the winter?	Yes, I do. / No, I don't. Yes, it is. / No, it isn't.

X WRONG	✓ RIGHT	WHY?
A digital nomad is someone which works online.	A digital nomad is someone who works online.	Use 'who' (or 'that') for people, not 'which'. TR İnsanlar için 'who' (ya da 'that') kullanılır, 'which' kullanılmaz.
The valley, that has no roads, is very isolated.	The valley, which has no roads, is very isolated.	'That' cannot be used in non-defining (comma) relative clauses; use 'which' or 'who' instead. TR Non-defining relative clause'larda (virgüllü) 'that' kullanılmaz; 'which' ya da 'who' kullanılır.
This is the cabin which they spent their first winter.	This is the cabin where they spent their first winter.	Use 'where' for places, because the clause is missing a preposition (in/at) that 'which' alone wouldn't supply. 1. Look at the title. What do you think it means to 'leave the grid'?
2. What do you imagine would be the hardest part of producing your own food and electricity?

The Family Who Left the Grid

- 1 Six years ago, Aylin and her husband sold their flat in the city, bought four hectares of rocky hillside, and moved into a tent while they built a house with their own hands. If they hadn't made that decision, they would still be commuting two hours a day and paying rent they could barely afford. Today they grow almost all of their own vegetables, keep chickens and goats, and generate their own electricity from a small solar array on the roof.
- 2 Life off-grid is not simply a romantic escape, however. Aylin describes the first winter as brutal: pipes froze, the solar panels produced almost no power on cloudy days, and there were weeks when the nearest working shop felt impossibly far away. 'We had to become resourceful fast,' she says. 'If we hadn't learned to fix things ourselves, we wouldn't have survived that winter.' Slowly, through trial and error, the family adapted.
- 3 What surprises visitors most is not the hardship but how ordinary the family's days now feel. Aylin no longer misses her old commute, and her children, who grew up thinking every home has running water on tap, now understand exactly where their food and power come from. 'People ask if we regret it,' she says. 'Honestly, if we hadn't taken the risk, I don't think we'd be half as happy as we are now.'

- What is the main idea of the text?
 - Off-grid living is easy and has no real difficulties.
 - A family's decision to live off-grid was hard at times but has ultimately made them happier and more self-sufficient.
 - The family regrets leaving the city and plans to move back.
- The family bought four hectares of hillside and lived in a _____ while they built their house.
- According to the text, what was especially difficult during the first winter?
 - The children refused to help with the animals.
 - Pipes froze and the solar panels produced little power.
 - The local council tried to stop them building.
- According to the text, Aylin says the family regrets taking the risk of moving off-grid.

1 Before you read*Make predictions before you read.*

- What do you already know about the job of a lighthouse keeper?

- Do you think isolated jobs like this still exist today? Where?

The Keeper of the Last Light

- On a narrow rock eighteen kilometres from the nearest coastline stands a lighthouse where Meltem has spent every summer for the past nine years. She is one of the very few keepers left whose job hasn't been fully replaced by automatic lights and remote sensors. For four months at a time, her only regular company is the sound of the wind, the occasional passing ship, and a radio link to the mainland.

- 2 The work itself is precise and demanding: checking the lamp mechanism, logging weather conditions, and keeping meticulous records that shipping companies still rely on. 'People imagine I just sit and read novels all day,' Meltem laughs, 'but a lighthouse that isn't properly maintained is a lighthouse that eventually fails — and ships depend on that light.' Supplies arrive by boat once a fortnight, weather permitting; when storms close in, they simply don't arrive.
- 3 What keeps Meltem returning each year is not tradition alone. She describes a quality of attention that isolated life demands — noticing the smallest change in the sky, the tide, the sound of the generator — that she has never found anywhere else. 'In the city, I moved through my days without really seeing them,' she explains. 'Out here, on a rock where almost nothing changes quickly, I finally learned to pay attention.'
