GRAMMAR

Present Perfect vs Present Perfect Progressive

Notice

I have lived in this flat since 2019.

My grandmother has been living with us for six months now, and she loves it.

We have already tidied the living room, so we can relax now.

My brother has been cleaning his room all morning, but it still looks messy.

Which sentences focus on the result or completion of an action, and which focus on the duration of an ongoing activity? Which time expressions (since, for, already, all morning) go with each form?

Complete the rule

Look at the Notice sentences again. Complete the rule with the words in the box.

have/has + past participle

have/has been + -ing

a finished action or result

how long an action has been in progress

Complete the rule

For a completed action, especially with just/already/yet/ever/never, we use the Present Perfect:

_____ •

✓ have/has + past participle

Complete the rule

For an activity that started in the past and is still continuing, or continued until recently (often with 'for' or 'since'), we use the Present Perfect Progressive: _____.

✓ have/has been + -ing

Complete the rule

The Present Perfect often highlights _____, while the Present Perfect Progressive often highlights _____.

✓ a finished action or result / how long an action has been in progress

The rule

The Present Perfect (have/has + past participle) describes a completed action or its result, connected to now (used with just, already, yet, ever, never, recently). The Present Perfect Progressive (have/has been + -ing) emphasises the DURATION of an action that started in the past and continues now, or continued until recently (often with for/since).

TR Present Perfect (have/has + fiilin 3. hali), geçmişte olmuş ve şu anla bağlantısı olan tamamlanmış bir eylemi ya da onun sonucunu anlatır (just, already, yet, ever, never, recently ile kullanılır). Present Perfect Progressive (have/has been + -ing) ise geçmişte başlayıp devam eden ya da yakın zamana kadar süren bir eylemin SÜRESİNE vurgu yapar (genellikle for/since ile).

When? Use the Present Perfect for a completed action or an experience (e.g. household chores); use the Present Perfect Progressive to emphasise how long a family has lived somewhere or how long an activity has continued.

TR Ev işleri gibi tamamlanmış bir eylemden veya deneyimden bahsederken Present Perfect; bir ailenin ne kadar süredir bir yerde yaşadığını ya da bir eylemin ne kadar sürdüğünü vurgularken Present Perfect Progressive kullanırız.

Our new neighbourhood is farther from the city centre than our old one.

Of all my cousins, Elif has the least patience for noisy family dinners.

Which words are comparative (comparing two things) and which are superlative (comparing three or more)? Do these adjectives follow the normal -er/-est or more/most pattern?

Complete the rule

bad – worse – worst

far – farther/further – farthest/furthest

little – less – least

many/much – more – most

✓ far – farther/further – farthest/furthest

Complete the rule

'Little' becomes _____ and 'many/much' becomes _____ .

✓ little – less – least / many/much – more – most

The rule

Some adjectives have irregular comparative and superlative forms: good-better-best, bad-worse-worst, far-farther/further-farthest/furthest, little-less-least, many/much-more-most. These do not take -er/-est or more/most — the whole word changes.

TR Bazı sıfatların karşılaştırma ve üstünlük halleri düzensizdir: good-better-best, bad-worse-worst, far-farther/further-farthest/furthest, little-less-least, many/much-more-most. Bu sıfatlara -er/-est eklenmez ya da more/most getirilmez; formları tamamen değişir.

When? We use these irregular forms when comparing homes, family situations and relationships — for example, which house is better, or who has less patience.

TR Ev, aile ve komşuluk ilişkilerini karşılaştırırken (örneğin hangi ev daha iyi, kimin sabrı daha az) bu düzensiz biçimleri kullanırız.

READING

Homes Around the World

Before you read

1. Look at the title. What different types of homes do you expect to read about?
2. What kind of home do you live in? How is it similar to or different from your neighbours' homes?

HOMES AROUND THE WORLD · 1 / 3

Step outside your own front door and you will find a huge variety of homes across the globe, each shaped by climate, geography and culture. In Mongolia, many nomadic families still live in a ger, a round, portable tent made of felt and wood that can be packed up and moved within a few hours when herders travel to new grazing land. In Hong Kong, by contrast, more than seven million people live in one of the most densely populated cities on Earth, and most families share small, efficient apartments stacked dozens of storeys high above narrow streets.

HOMES AROUND THE WORLD · 2 / 3

In parts of Southeast Asia and West Africa, stilt houses raise the living space above rivers, floodwater or simply the damp ground, keeping homes cooler and safer from pests. In the Netherlands, some families have chosen to live on the water itself, in houseboats moored along the canals — a practical answer to a small, flat country with limited land. Meanwhile, in the suburbs of many Western cities, detached houses with private gardens remain the dream for families who value space and privacy above all else.

HOMES AROUND THE WORLD · 3 / 3

These differences are rarely accidental. A home's shape, size and materials usually reflect what is available locally, how extended a family typically is, and how much space a culture expects each generation to share. Understanding housing diversity, then, is really a way of understanding how people everywhere adapt to their environment — and to each other.

While you read

What is the main idea of the text?

a One type of housing is better than all the others.

b Housing around the world varies widely because of climate, geography and culture.

c All families around the world live in the same type of home.

READING

Three Generations, One Roof

Before you read

1. What do you think are the biggest challenges of living with grandparents or other relatives in the same house?
2. Predict: what solutions might a family find for daily conflicts like these?

THREE GENERATIONS, ONE ROOF · 1 / 3

When Zeynep's grandparents moved in with her family two years ago, the house suddenly felt smaller — and louder. Zeynep, her parents, her younger brother, and now her grandparents all share one kitchen, one living room, and, most of the time, one opinion about how loudly the television should be played. 'At first, it was strange,' Zeynep admits. 'My grandmother wanted dinner at six, my parents preferred eight, and nobody could agree on the thermostat.'

THREE GENERATIONS, ONE ROOF · 2 / 3

Daily conflicts like these are common in multi-generational households, where different generations often have different habits, schedules and expectations about privacy. Zeynep's family found that the biggest arguments weren't really about dinner times or the television — they were about respect and personal space. Her parents felt that they had lost some control over their own home; her grandparents felt that their advice, built on decades of experience, was not always welcome.

THREE GENERATIONS, ONE ROOF · 3 / 3

Slowly, the family developed a few simple house rules: everyone gets one hour of quiet time in the evening, chores are divided fairly between the generations, and big decisions — from meals to holidays — are discussed together at a short Sunday meeting. 'It's not perfect,' says Zeynep, 'but we've learned to compromise, and honestly, having my grandparents here has been the best thing that's happened to our family. My brother and I have learned so much from them, and they don't feel lonely anymore.'
