

YEAR 9 (AFTER PREP) · THEME 6 · LIFE IN THE WORLD & CULTURE

Reading

B2.1

The World on One Plate · When Screens and Stadiums Cross Borders

Hazırlık Sonrası 9. Sınıf

Name – Surname

Class

No

Date

Aim Understand the main idea and details, make inferences and connect the text to your own life.

1 Before you read

Make predictions before you read.

1. Look at the title. What do you think the text will compare?
2. Name one dish you have tried that mixes ingredients or styles from two different countries.

The World on One Plate

- 1 Walk through a night market in Bangkok, a food hall in Istanbul, or a food truck festival in Los Angeles, and you will notice something similar: dishes from completely different culinary traditions sitting side by side. A steaming bowl of Vietnamese pho might be served next to Mexican tacos, while a stall selling Turkish gözleme stands opposite one offering Korean fried chicken. This mixing of cuisines is not an accident — it is one of the clearest signs of globalisation in everyday life.
- 2 For centuries, food travelled slowly, carried by traders, sailors and migrants along routes such as the Silk Road. Spices, rice and tea moved from one culture to another over months or years. Today, the same process happens almost instantly. A new fusion restaurant in Seoul can go viral on social media, and within days, food lovers in São Paulo or Cairo are trying to recreate the recipe at home. Globalisation hasn't only sped up the exchange of food; it has completely reshaped what "authentic" cuisine even means.
- 3 Not everyone welcomes this change. Some chefs and food historians worry that fusion cuisine and global franchises could slowly replace local culinary heritage, especially among younger generations who grow up eating international fast food rather than traditional family recipes. Others argue the opposite: that global attention actually helps preserve dying culinary traditions, because chefs who blend old recipes with new ideas often bring worldwide interest — and funding — back to the original dish.
- 4 Whatever the outcome, one thing seems certain. As long as people keep travelling, migrating and sharing photos of their meals online, the world's cuisines will keep influencing each other — and our plates will continue to tell the story of a more connected planet.

288 words

2 While you read

5 × 2 pts

Circle the correct option.

1. What is the main idea of the text?
 - a Fusion food is always better than traditional food.
 - b Globalisation is changing how cuisines mix and how we understand "authentic" food.
 - c Food never changes from one generation to the next.
2. In the past, food travelled slowly along routes such as the _____.
3. According to the text, some chefs and food historians worry that:
 - a fusion cuisine and global franchises could replace local culinary heritage
 - b traditional recipes are becoming too expensive
 - c food no longer travels between countries
4. Everyone in the text agrees that globalisation is bad for traditional food. ☐ Correct ☐ Incorrect
5. A new fusion restaurant can go viral on social media, and within days, people elsewhere try to _____ the recipe at home.

3 After you read*Write short answers. Then compare with a partner.*

1. Do you think globalisation is generally good or bad for local food traditions? Give a reason.

2. Write one sentence describing a fusion dish you would like to try.

1 Before you read*Make predictions before you read.*

1. What sport, film or type of music from another country do you enjoy?

2. Do you think it's easier to access international entertainment now than it was for your parents' generation?

When Screens and Stadiums Cross Borders

- 1 Twenty years ago, a teenager in a small town might have grown up watching only local television and listening to music sung in their own language. Today, that same teenager can stream a Korean drama with subtitles, follow a Spanish football league on their phone, and add a Nigerian afrobeats song to their playlist — all before breakfast. Entertainment, like food, has become genuinely global.

- 2 Sport offers one of the clearest examples. International tournaments such as the World Cup or the Olympics attract fan bases that stretch across every continent, uniting people who may never have met and who support their teams for reasons connected to family, history or simple love of the game. A goal scored in one stadium can be celebrated by millions of people thousands of kilometres away within seconds, thanks to live streaming and social media.
- 3 Film and music tell a similar story. A blockbuster produced in one country can top the box office worldwide, and a song released with no marketing budget can become a global phenomenon purely because listeners share it online. Streaming platforms now recommend content from dozens of countries, meaning audiences are exposed to storytelling styles, humour and music that would have been almost impossible to access a generation ago.
- 4 Of course, this cultural exchange raises questions too. Does easy access to international blockbusters threaten smaller national film industries? Could the popularity of a handful of global superstars crowd out local musicians? For now, most researchers agree that globalisation in entertainment tends to add variety rather than erase it — but they also agree that supporting local artists remains important if that variety is going to survive.

275 words

2 While you read

5 × 2 pts

Circle the correct option.

1. What is the writer's main point about entertainment today?
 - a Local entertainment no longer exists anywhere.
 - b People now have easy access to sport, film and music from all over the world.
 - c Streaming platforms only show content from one country.
2. International tournaments such as the World Cup attract _____ that stretch across every continent.
3. According to the text, most researchers think globalisation always destroys local culture.

☐ Correct
 ☐ Incorrect
4. What question does the text raise about globalisation in entertainment?
 - a Whether it could threaten smaller national film industries
 - b Whether stadiums should be built bigger
 - c Whether subtitles should be removed from films
5. A song released with no marketing budget can become a global _____ purely because listeners share it online.

3 After you read

Write short answers. Then compare with a partner.

1. Do you agree that supporting local artists is important, even when global stars are easy to access? Why or why not?

2. Describe one international film, song or sports event that became popular in Türkiye.
