Past Continuous & used to

İki yapı da geçmişle ilgilidir ama farklı amaçlarla kullanılır. Past Continuous geçmişte devam eden bir eylemi, used to ise artık olmayan geçmiş alışkanlıkları anlatır.

Past Continuous — was/were + V-ing

Yapı	Ne zaman?	Örnek
was/were + V-ing	Geçmişte süren eylem	She was studying when I called.

Yapı	Ne zaman?	Örnek
while + was/were + V-ing	İki eş zamanlı eylem	While I was cooking , he was reading.
when + Simple Past	Devam ederken başka şey oldu	I was walking when it started to rain.

📌 used to — Geçmiş alışkanlıklar

Yapı	Anlam	Örnek
used to + V1	Artık olmayan alışkanlık	I used to walk to school. (artık etmiyorum)
didn't use to + V1	Eskiden yapmıyordum	She didn't use to like coffee.
Did ... use to + V1?	Soru	Did you use to play football?

✂ DON'T CONFUSE — used to vs would used to → hem alışkanlık hem durum:

"I used to live in Izmir." (durum — artık orada değilim)

"I used to play tennis." (alışkanlık)

would → sadece geçmiş alışkanlıklar (durum için kullanılmaz!):

✓ "When I was young, I would play football every day."

✗ "I would live in Izmir." → would durum için kullanılmaz!

Past Continuous — hikaye anlatımı

It was raining when she left.

While he was sleeping, the phone rang.

I was making tea when the lights went out.

used to — geçmiş vs şimdi

I used to hate vegetables. (şimdi seviyorum)

She didn't use to wear glasses.

People used to travel by horse. (artık değil)

The Forgetting Curve

In 1885, German psychologist Hermann Ebbinghaus made a disturbing discovery. He was studying his own memory — testing himself with lists of nonsense syllables — when he noticed a worrying pattern.

Without review, he was forgetting more than half of new material within one hour. Within 24 hours, about two-thirds was gone. He called this the "forgetting curve."

Many students today still make the same mistakes Ebbinghaus documented. They used to believe — and many still do — that rereading notes is effective. Research suggests this is not very effective. When students were rereading their notes in studies, they were creating an illusion of knowledge, not genuine learning.

The most effective technique is active recall: closing your book and testing yourself. When psychologists Henry Roediger and Jeffrey Karpicke were studying this technique in 2006, they found that students who tested themselves remembered about 56% of a text one week later — compared with 42% for students who simply reread it.

Students used to spend hours highlighting and rereading. Now, the evidence is clear: spaced repetition and retrieval practice — not cramming — are the foundations of lasting memory.

1. He was studying his own memory, testing himself with lists of nonsense syllables.
2. About two-thirds.
3. They believe rereading notes is effective, but it creates only an illusion of knowledge.
4. Closing your book and testing yourself — after one week, students who tested themselves remembered about 56% of a text, compared with 42% for rereading.

Writing — örnek cevaplar

Görev 1 — Geçmiş alışkanlıklar

I used to study alone, but now I much prefer studying in groups. When I was younger, I was always forgetting my homework at home. I didn't use to enjoy reading novels, but now I read every night before bed. I was studying late one evening when I discovered the Pomodoro technique — it changed everything.

Görev 2 — Öğrenme yöntemi

My most effective study technique is the Pomodoro method: 25 minutes of focused work, then a 5-minute break. I discovered it last year when I was struggling with my exams. Before that, I was studying for hours without breaks — it used to be absolutely exhausting. Now I feel much more productive.
