Passive Voice: Perfect Tenses

The passive voice with perfect tenses focuses on the action or its result rather than who does it. Structure: have/has/had/will have + been + past participle.

Edilgen çatı (passive voice), mükemmel zamanlarla (perfect tenses) birlikte kullanıldığında, eylemi yapan kişi yerine eylemin sonucuna odaklanılır. Yapı: have/has/had/will have + been + fiilin 3. hali (past participle).

When? We use it when it is not important or not known who did the action, or when the result itself is the focus (applications, decisions, plans).

Kim yaptığı önemli değilse ya da bilinmiyorsa, ya da sonucun kendisi önemliyse (başvurular, kararlar, planlar) kullanılır.

Positive

- Her application has been accepted.
- The plan had been finished before the meeting.

Negative

- The letter hasn't been sent yet.
- The decision hadn't been made before we arrived.

Question

- Has the project been completed?
- Had the plan been approved before the deadline?

Short answers

- Yes, it has. / No, it hasn't.
- Yes, it had. / No, it hadn't.

Common mistakes

- ~~Her application has accepted.~~ → Her application has been accepted.
- ~~The plan was been finished.~~ → The plan had been finished.

1. Her project _____ finished before the deadline.

- a. has been
- b. had been
- c. was been

2. By next year, the new plan _____ completed.

9. B: Yes! It _____ (accept) last week.

10. They had finished the plan before the meeting. (Make it passive.)

Present Perfect Progressive: ongoing efforts

The Present Perfect Progressive (have/has been + verb-ing) describes actions that started in the past and are still continuing, or that have just stopped with a visible result now. It emphasises the duration or continuity of the action.

Present Perfect Progressive (have/has been + fiil-ing), geçmişte başlayıp devam eden ya da yakın zamanda biten ve sonucu şu an görülen eylemleri anlatır; eylemin sürekliliğine ya da süresine vurgu yapar.

When? We use it to talk about ongoing efforts towards a goal, habits, or recent actions whose effect is still felt now.

Bir hedefe doğru süren çabaları, alışkanlıkları ya da yakın zamanda biten ama etkisi hâlâ hissedilen eylemleri anlatırken kullanılır.

Positive

- She has been working hard.
- They have been saving money for a trip.

Negative

- He hasn't been sleeping well.
- We haven't been practising enough.

Question

- Has she been studying for the exam?
- Have you been planning this for long?

Short answers

9. B: I _____ (work) on it since last month.

10. My brother is practising basketball every day this month. (Rewrite to show this started a month ago and continues, using the present perfect progressive.)

Able to: ability in different tenses

'Able to' expresses ability and, unlike can/could, can be used in any tense: is/are able to (present), was/were able to (past — often preferred for a single specific achievement), will be able to (future), has/have been able to (an achievement up to now).

'Able to' yetenek anlatır ve can/could'un aksine tüm zamanlarda kullanılabilir: is/are able to (şimdi), was/were able to (geçmiş, genellikle tek seferlik bir başarı için tercih edilir), will be able to (gelecek), has/have been able to (şimdiye kadar başarılmış bir şey).

When? We use it to talk about future or 'up to now' abilities (where can/could don't exist), or to emphasise a single specific achievement in the past.

Gelecekteki ya da şimdiye kadarki yetenek/başarıları anlatırken ya da geçmişte tek bir olayda başarılmış bir şeyi vurgularken kullanılır.

Positive

- She was able to pass the exam.
- They will be able to travel next year.

Negative

- He wasn't able to finish on time.
- We won't be able to attend the ceremony.

Question

- Were you able to solve the problem?
- Will she be able to join us?

Short answers

- Yes, I was. / No, I wasn't.
- Yes, she will. / No, she won't.

Common mistakes

- ~~She will can speak English fluently.~~ → She will be able to speak English fluently.

A Family of Dreams

Before you read

- Look at the title. What do you think this text is about?
- Guess: what job or dream might each family member have?

My name is Elif and my family has many different dreams for the future. For our school project, we have been thinking about each person's aspirations and how we support each other.

My father has always wanted to open his own bakery. He has been saving money for years, and last month he was finally able to rent a small shop in our neighbourhood. My mother is proud of him and helps him plan the menu every evening.

My older brother, Kaan, hopes to become a software engineer. He is interested in computers and has been learning to code since he was twelve. My parents believe in his ability, so they bought him a new laptop for his birthday.

As for me, my ambition is to study medicine. I want to help people who are ill, just like the doctor who took care of my grandmother. My family encourages me to study hard, and I am determined to achieve my goal.

We all support each other's dreams. My father says that with persistence and a little help from your family, almost anything is possible.

1. What is the text mainly about?
 - a. A family's different future dreams and support for each other
 - b. A family's holiday plans
 - c. A school's new building
2. What has Elif's father been doing for years?
 - a. Learning to code
 - b. Saving money for a bakery

My Sister's Changing Plans

Before you read

- What do you think 'changing your mind about the future' means?
- Guess: why might someone change their career plan?

For years, my sister Selin has been talking about becoming a lawyer. She has always been good at arguing and giving opinions, so it seemed like the perfect career for her.

Last year, however, Selin started volunteering at an animal shelter near our house. She has been working there every weekend since March, and she quickly fell in love with the work.

Now Selin has decided to study veterinary medicine instead of law. She has been able to talk to a real vet about the course, and she has been preparing for the entrance exam every evening.

At first, our parents were surprised, but they have been very supportive. My mother says it's normal for people's ambitions to change as they discover new interests.

Selin is now determined to work towards her new goal. She says the most important thing is to follow a path that makes you happy, not just a path that other people expect.

1. What did Selin originally want to become?

- a. A vet
- b. A lawyer
- c. A teacher

2. What has Selin been doing since March?

- a. Studying law
