Past Perfect: telling a travel story in order

We use the Past Perfect (had + V3) for an action that happened before another action in the past — it makes clear which past event came first. Negative: hadn't + V3. Question: Had + subject + V3?

Past Perfect (had + V3), geçmişte başka bir geçmiş olaydan önce olan bir eylemi anlatmak için kullanılır: iki geçmiş olay arasında hangisinin önce olduğunu netleştirir. Olumsuzda hadn't + V3, soruda Had + özne + V3 kullanılır.

When? We use it when telling a travel story and we need to show which of two past events happened first — for example, what had already happened before we arrived.

Bir seyahat hikâyesini anlatırken, iki geçmiş olayı sırasıyla belirtmek istediğimizde kullanırız: örneğin, biz varmadan önce ne olmuştu.

Positive

- By the time we arrived, the tour had already started.
- She had visited three capitals before she turned twenty.

Negative

- We hadn't seen the landmark before that day.
- He hadn't tried the local food before his trip.

Question

- Had you seen the Eiffel Tower before?
- Had they booked the hotel before they landed?

Short answers

- Yes, I had. / No, I hadn't.
- Yes, they had. / No, they hadn't.

Common mistakes

- ~~By the time we arrived, the guide has already started.~~ → By the time we arrived, the guide had already started.
- ~~I hadn't visit the capital before.~~ → I hadn't visited the capital before.

1. By the time we reached the square, the parade _____ already _____.

- a. had / started
- b. has / started
- c. did / start

2. We _____ visited that landmark before our trip last year.

- a. didn't
- b. haven't
- c. hadn't

3. _____ you seen the ancient ruins before you moved to Rome?

- a. Did
- b. Have
- c. Had

4. When she arrived at the museum, it _____ closed.
- a. just
 - b. had just
 - c. has just
5. They _____ (already / book) their flights before the prices went up.
6. I _____ (not try) the local cuisine before I visited that country.
7. By the time the tourists arrived, the monument had already closed for the day. — True / False
8. She had visit five capitals before she was eighteen. — True / False
9. A: _____ you _____ (visit) the landmark before your trip this year?
10. B: No, I _____ (not / see) it before, but my brother _____ (already / go) there twice.
11. Make a question about a past trip.

Reported speech (mixed tenses): reporting what people said about their travels

In reported speech, the verb usually moves one tense back: Present Simple → Past Simple, Past Simple → Past Perfect, be going to → was/were going to, Present Perfect → Past Perfect. Time and place words also change: now → then, here → there, tomorrow → the next day.

Reported speech'te (dolaylı anlatım), söylenen cümleyi kendi cümlemizmiş gibi aktarırken fiil genellikle bir zaman geriye kayar: Present Simple → Past Simple, Past Simple → Past Perfect, be going to → was/were going to, Present Perfect → Past Perfect. Zaman/yer zarfları da değişir: now → then, here → there, tomorrow → the next day.

When? We use it when telling someone else what a person said about their travels, cultures or places, and it requires mixing different past tenses correctly.

Birinin seyahatler, kültürler veya yerler hakkında söylediklerini başka birine aktarırken kullanılır; farklı geçmiş zamanların doğru sırayla kullanılmasını gerektirir.

Positive

- She said (that) she had visited the capital.
- He said (that) he was going to travel next year.

Negative

- They said (that) they hadn't tried the local food.
- She said (that) she didn't like the crowded landmark.

Question

- I asked her if/whether she had enjoyed the trip.

Short answers

- She said she had. / He said he hadn't.

Common mistakes

- ~~She said that she visits the capital every year.~~ → She said that she visited the capital every year.
- ~~He said he is going to travel next year.~~ → He said he was going to travel the following year.

11. "I'm going to visit five landmarks this year," said Zeynep. (Rewrite as reported speech.)

Past modals: could / should / would / might have V3

Modal + have + V3 is used for things in the past that didn't happen, or that we are not sure about. Should have: something that didn't happen but should have (regret/criticism). Could have: a past possibility that didn't happen. Might/may have: an unsure guess about the past. Would have: imagining what would have happened in a different past situation.

Modal + have + V3 yapısı, geçmişte gerçekleşmemiş ya da gerçekleşip gerçekleşmediğinden emin olmadığımız durumlar için kullanılır. Should have: geçmişte yapılmayan ama yapılması gereken bir şey (pişmanlık/eleştiri). Could have: geçmişte mümkün olan ama olmayan bir seçenek. Might/may have: geçmiş hakkında emin olmayan bir tahmin. Would have: farklı bir geçmiş durumda ne olacağını hayal etme.

When? We use these to criticise a travel mistake, talk about a missed opportunity, or guess about something that might have happened in the past.

Bir seyahat hatasını eleştirirken, kaçırılan bir fırsatı anlatırken ya da geçmişte olabilecek bir şeyi tahmin ederken kullanırız.

Positive

- We should have booked earlier.

Negative

- You shouldn't have missed the tour.

- She might have taken the wrong train.

- He couldn't have known about the custom.

Capitals That Might Surprise You

Before you read

- Look at the title. Which capital cities do you already know? Name three.
- Guess: is the biggest city in a country always its capital?

When people think of a capital city, they often imagine the biggest, busiest city in the country. But that isn't always true. In some countries, the capital is a smaller, quieter administrative city, built specially to be the seat of government.

Brazil is a good example. Rio de Janeiro used to be the capital, but in 1960 the government had already decided to relocate the capital to a new city called Brasília. City planners had designed Brasília from nothing, in the shape of an aeroplane, in the middle of the country. Today, government buildings, embassies and diplomats fill the city, while Rio remains the more famous tourist destination.

Another surprising example is Switzerland. Many people guess that Zürich, the biggest and richest city, is the capital. In fact, Bern, a much smaller city with a lower population, holds that role. Bern's old town, with its narrow streets and medieval towers, is now a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Turkey has a similar story. Istanbul is the largest city and the main cultural and economic centre, but Ankara has been the official capital since 1923, when the young republic had chosen it as a more central administrative city.

So, before you travel, it's worth checking: is the capital the city everyone talks about, or is it a quieter place with a very different kind of importance?

1. What is the text mainly about?

- a. Why capital cities are always the biggest city
- b. Capital cities that are not the biggest or most famous city in their country
- c. How to become a diplomat

2. Why did Brazil relocate its capital to Brasília?

- a. Rio de Janeiro was destroyed
- b. The government wanted a new, planned administrative city
- c. Brasília is the biggest city

3. What shape was Brasília designed in?

- a. A circle
- b. An aeroplane
- c. A star

4. In paragraph 3, what is true about Bern?

- a. It is Switzerland's biggest city
- b. It is smaller than Zürich but is the capital
- c. It has no government buildings

5. Istanbul has been the official capital of Turkey since 1923. — True / False

6. Why does the writer suggest checking before you travel?

- AbOnlineEnglish Upper Secondary — Lise Hazırlık — Complete Theme · Orijinal içerik, TYMM müfredatıyla uyumlu.
- a. Because tickets are expensive
 - b. Because the capital isn't always the city everyone knows about
 - c. Because capitals change every year

After you read

- Which country's capital surprised you most? Write two sentences.
- Choose a capital city you would like to visit and give one reason why.

The Landmark and the Story Behind It

Before you read

- Look at the title. Which famous landmark do you think this text is about?
- Guess: was this landmark originally built for the reason people visit it today?

Millions of tourists visit the Eiffel Tower every year, but most don't know it was almost destroyed. In 1889, the tower had been built as a temporary entrance for the World's Fair in Paris. Many people at the time thought it was ugly, and the plan was to take it down after twenty years.

By the time the twenty years had passed, engineers had already found a new use for the tower: radio transmission. Because it was so tall, it was perfect for sending radio signals across the city. This breathtaking piece of engineering had earned itself a permanent place in Paris.

Today, the tower attracts around seven million visitors a year, making it one of the most-visited paid landmarks in the world. Tourists climb it, take photographs from below, and watch it sparkle with lights every evening.

This story shows something interesting about landmarks: sometimes they aren't built to become symbols. Their history, use, and the culture around them can change how people see a place over time.

So next time you take a photo next to a famous monument, it might be worth asking: what was this place originally built for, and how did it become so important?

1. What is the text mainly about?

- a. How to build a tower
- b. The surprising history behind a famous landmark
- c. The cost of visiting Paris

2. Why was the Eiffel Tower originally built?

- a. As a permanent monument
- b. As a temporary entrance for the World's Fair
- c. As a radio station

3. What saved the tower from being destroyed?

- a. Tourists loved it
- b. It was useful for radio transmission
- c. It was too expensive to remove

4. About how many visitors does the tower attract each year?

- a. Around seven thousand
- b. Around seven hundred thousand
- c. Around seven million

5. The Eiffel Tower was always planned as a permanent monument. — True / False

6. What point does the writer make at the end of the text?

- a. Landmarks never change their purpose
- b. A landmark's history and culture can change how people see it over time
- c. All landmarks are built for tourists

After you read

- Do you know the story behind a landmark in your own city or country? Write two sentences.
- Which capital city or landmark would you include in a project about your ideal world tour? Give one reason.

A Cultural Misunderstanding

Before you listen

- You will hear a conversation about a mix-up caused by cultural differences.
- Predict: what kind of misunderstanding might happen when someone visits a new country?

1. Where did Zeynep visit her friend's family?

- a. Japan
- b. South Korea
- c. China

2. What mistake did Zeynep make?

- a. She poured her own drink at dinner
- b. She arrived late
- c. She wore shoes indoors

3. How did the grandmother react?

- a. She was very angry
- b. She laughed and explained the tradition
- c. She left the room

4. In the story, people in South Korea usually keep their shoes on inside a house. — True / False

5. What does Zeynep decide to do at the end?
