A Great Day in the City Centre

Before you read

- Look at the title. What attractions do you think the writer visited?
- Guess: which place do you think the writer liked best — a park, a museum, or a mall?

My name is Aslı, and last Saturday I visited the city centre with my family. We wanted to see some of the most popular attractions and recreational places in our city.

First, we went to Riverside Park, a large green area next to the river. It was much quieter than the busy streets near our house, and there was a lovely playground for my little brother. We sat on the grass and had a picnic before we walked around the lake.

After the park, we visited the City History Museum. It was more interesting than I expected! There were old photos of our city from a hundred years ago, and a friendly guide explained how the neighbourhood changed over time. My favourite part was the model of the old market square.

In the afternoon, we went to Central Mall, the biggest shopping centre in our city. It was more crowded than the museum, but it had a cinema, a food court, and dozens of shops. We watched a film and ate dinner there before we went home.

It was a great day. The park was more relaxing than the mall, but the museum taught me the most about my own city. Next time, I want to visit the old castle on the hill — I've heard it's even more beautiful than the museum.

A Morning of Errands

Before you read

- Which services do you think people need most in a neighbourhood? Name two.
- Look at the title 'A Morning of Errands'. What errands do you think Mr Kaya needs to do?

On Saturday morning, Mr Kaya had a lot of errands to do in his neighbourhood. His daughter, Elif, decided to go with him and help.

Their first stop was the post office. Elif enjoyed posting a parcel to her cousin, and the clerk was very helpful. Next, they walked to the pharmacy to buy some medicine for Elif's grandmother. The pharmacy was smaller than the supermarket next door, but the pharmacist knew Elif's family well.

After that, Mr Kaya remembered that the library book was due back that day. They hurried to the library, which was busier than usual because of a children's story time. Elif loved choosing three new books before they left.

Their last stop was the community centre, where Elif's mother works as a volunteer. The centre offers free English classes, a food bank, and after-school clubs for children. Mr Kaya and Elif helped set up chairs for an evening meeting before they walked home.

By midday, Elif understood why her father always says that good services make a neighbourhood a better place to live. She started thinking about which services she wanted to include in her class project about their city.
