A Weekend Camping Trip

Before you read

- Look at the title. What daily activities do people usually do when camping?
- Guess: what problems might happen on a camping trip?

Last month, my family and I went camping near Lake Abant. We packed our backpacks and drove to the campsite early on Saturday morning. When we arrived, we set up camp near a small forest, close to a clear river.

At sunrise on the first day, we were already awake and ready for a hike. We followed a long trail through the trees and saw a lot of wildlife, including deer and colourful birds. My little sister could name almost every bird we saw!

In the afternoon, we made a campfire and cooked simple food. While we were cooking, my dad told stories about his own camping trips when he was young. He said he could survive for days with just a small backpack and a compass.

At night, the sky was full of stars, and we couldn't hear any city noise at all — only the wind in the trees. We were sitting around the campfire when we suddenly heard an owl.

The next morning, before we left, we checked our tent for any damage and cleaned up the campsite. It was a simple weekend, but it taught me how much I love spending time in nature.

Caught in a Storm on Uludağ

Before you read

- What extreme weather conditions can be dangerous for hikers?
- Guess: what should hikers do if a storm starts suddenly?

Two years ago, Kaan and his cousin Derin went on a hiking adventure on Uludağ. They were walking along a narrow trail near a cliff when the weather suddenly changed.

Dark clouds appeared quickly, and soon they heard thunder in the distance. 'We should find shelter now,' said Kaan, looking at the sky nervously. They couldn't see the trail clearly because of the heavy rain.

While they were looking for shelter, they found a small cave near a waterfall. They quickly went inside and waited for the storm to pass. Lightning struck a tree close to the cave, and they were both frightened.

Kaan remembered his father's advice: 'You should always carry a compass and extra water on a hike, and you shouldn't panic in a storm.' He used his compass to check their direction while they waited.

After almost an hour, the storm finally stopped. They were cold and wet, but they were safe. They walked back to the campsite carefully, using the compass to find the right path.

Kaan says this adventure taught him an important lesson: nature can be beautiful, but you should always be prepared for extreme weather.

1. What is this story mainly about?

- a. Two hikers finding wildlife
- b. Two hikers caught in a sudden storm
- c. A family camping trip

2. Where did Kaan and Derin find shelter?

- a. In a cave near a waterfall
- b. In a tent
- c. Under a tree only

3. In paragraph 4, 'his' refers to...

- b. Kaan's
- c. the guide's

4. What did Kaan's father advise?

- a. ~~Never go hiking alone~~
- b. Carry a compass and extra water, and don't panic in a storm
- c. Always hike at night

5. Kaan and Derin could see the trail clearly during the storm. — True / False

6. What lesson did Kaan learn from this adventure?

- a. Nature is always dangerous, so avoid it
- b. You should always be prepared for extreme weather
- c. Storms never really happen on mountains

After you read
